BREVITIES.

Bargains in garden hose at Lange & Schmitt's.

Feed, wheat etc., for sale. See advertisement.

Five room cottage for sale. Second advertisement.

Senator T. B. Riekey of Ormsby, visited Reno Sunday.

A railroad in Colorado is ballasted for some distance with rock salt.

Senator Foley returned yesterday from a visit to the Southern part of California.

Lawn mowers, garden tools and paint and oils a specialty at Lange & Schmitt's.

J. G. Kerth has been confined to his house for several days with a severe sore throat.

Plumbing, tinning and pipe work done at the lowest possible prices by Lange & Schmitt.

The weather continues cool, and the Truckee river in consequence is as low as it was in mid-Winter.

Two good rooms, suitable for offices, four doors from Postoffice, for rent cheap. Inquire at JOURNAL office.

Mr. Simpson of Camerada who was here attending the Democratic State Central Committee meeting, left for home yesterday.

In diplomacy "modus vivendi" means a temporary agreement that shall be observed until a new arrangement shall have been inaugurated.

The Truckee Republican says the model of E. R. Merrill's steam sleigh worked satisfactorily, and has been stored away until the inventor can secure patents.

Alex Wise of Winnemucca, and his daughter Miss Phoebe, arrived in Reno yesterday. Miss Wise attended school at Mt. St. Mary's Academy, and will remain here visiting friends.

Sam Cheney, Superintendent of the Jamison Mining Company, at Johnsonville, Plumas county, Cal., arrived in town yesterday from the north and proceeded on to San Francisco last night.

The Republican says while Truckee boasts of being one of the very few towns of the coast that has banished the Chinese, it is said that the Reno laundries of the heathen are well patronized by Truckee people.

During the recent fighting on the Kesh-mit frontiers when the British troops defeated the rebellious Hanzas, the natives used bullets of garnets incased in lead. The British have preserved some of these costly bullets as dearly bought curiosities.

The Live Stock Report says the only off set wool men have for low prices of that article has been the high price of mutton. Altogether the situation has a gloomy outlook for wool-growers, and it cannot be where the tariff has had anything to do with the prices of wool.

Twelve applications, embracing 1,758.43 acres, were made for State lands last week, and the payments on applications, contracts and interest amounted to $1,963.44. Four approved lists of lands, covering 276,037.42 acres were received from Washington, making a total of 1,433,447 acres approved to the State under the Two Million-acre land grant.

The San Francisco Live Stock Report and Butchers' Gazette reports a better market for beef, which now sells from 6 1/2 to 7 1/2 cents per pound. It again reminds its cattle friends that they have the future of the market in their own hands. There are barely fat cattle enough within reach to last until June, when the earliest grass fed will be ready. Nothing will be lost but rather gained by sending in cattle slowly so as to have yet some to sell in the beginning of May.

HUMAN SKULLS FOUND.

Emigrants Probably Murdered by Indians.

Saturday afternoon while plowing at his ranch above Powning's Addition G. B. Ginoebio unearthed four human skulls and some other bones. Two of the skulls were of adults and two of children. They were close together, about eighteen inches under the surface and were broken by the plow. It is supposed that they were the remains of a husband and wife and two children, doubtless white people. The old emigrant road ran in the immediate vicinity of the place where the bones were, and it is not improbable that the family, of which these are the only relics, were killed by Indians. That, however, is merely a surmise and no one will ever know whether they were murdered, or died of some disease, or by whom they were buried in the black loam, where their bones were found.

Eyes and Ears Open.

And you will see and hear many things to your advantage. With open eyes you cannot fail to see the advertisement of Simmons' Liver Regulator, and with ears open you will constantly hear of the relief it gives millions who suffer with indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation or biliousness. A dose now and then and you'll not know anything about malaria, that miserable, tired-out feeling.

The Riverside Gallery

Is now open and ready for business. All kinds of photograph work will be promptly done and satisfaction guaranteed. Copying, enlarging, crayon, pastel, India ink, and oil portrait work done. Duplicate prints can be made from the negatives taken by Messrs. Rifenberg & Dove and Messrs. Swisher & Bender. ap51w

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

The Great Silver Battle—The Most Interesting Debate for Years—Wall Street Triumphant.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30, 1922.

EDITOR NEVADA STATE JOURNAL:—The great silver battle is over, and

WALL STREET FOR THE TIME HAS TRIUMPHED. It is a bitter disappointment to Bland, Bartine and the other leaders in the silver fight. But no blame can be attached to any of these tried and true champions of the cause of silver. From first to last the fight was fiercely contested, and nothing but those potent influences, which Wall Street knows so well how to use, have compassed our defeat.

The vote on tabling the bill was a surprise to all. The silver leaders had been confidently counting on a majority, ranging from 30 to 40 in favor of the bill, and there is scarcely a doubt that upon a fair vote directly upon the bill it would have carried. However a considerable number of free coinage members feared the political results of pressing the bill at this time, and they sought every opportunity to shelve it on side issues.

From the close of the debate at 5 p. m. until after midnight the filibustering was continued. Motions to table the bill, to reconsider, to adjourn, to take a recess and the like followed each other as rapidly as they could be made. Finally perceiving the impossibility of reaching a decisive vote, Mr. Bland moved an adjournment.

At that time and until Monday morning, the belief was almost universal that the Committee on Rules would bring in a special order which would prevent filibustering and enable the friends of silver to force a direct vote. Bland and Pierce both claimed that they had the most positive assurance from the Speaker that such an order would be brought in. The mortification and chagrin of those who have borne the brunt of this great contest can better be imagined than described.

MOST INTERESTING DEBATE FOR YEARS. Not in ten years has any question aroused the interest that was manifested throughout the whole of the debate, and until the last vote was cast.

The galleries were crammed. There was not standing room, even in the aisles, and almost every member was in his seat. The debate was one of unusual brilliancy and power, and every speech which possessed any merit was listened to with almost breathless interest. Of the magnificent speeches made it is conceded that Bartine's was one of the clearest, strongest and best. This is admitted by both sides. Congressman Amos J. Cummings of New York, in his descriptive letter to the New York Sun, pronounces it the best silver speech of the debate. Coming from such a source, this is a compliment of which both Mr. Bartine and the State may well be proud. The manner in which Mr. Bartine exposed the shallowness of Congressman Harter was a tremendous hit and literally brought down the House.

CONTRADICTION ARGUMENT.

Mr. Harter has been flooding the country with circulars addressed to the G. A. R. Post, urging that the passage of this bill would exempt the pensioner to receive his allowance in 70-cent dollars, while in another circular he declares that the effect will be to give the silver miner 100 cents for 70 cents' worth of bullion.

"The process of reasoning," said Mr. Bartine, "by which he reaches the conclusion that the same dollar is going to be worth 100 cents to the silver miner and only 70 or perhaps 60 to the pensioner, when it comes to be understood, will no doubt occupy a unique place in mental philosophy. I have no doubt that the gentleman has 'reasoned' with the problem and thinks he has solved it. Perhaps he has. But what is he going to do with a case in which a man happens to be both a silver miner and a pensioner? The man takes a quantity of bullion to the mint and receives coins for it. He then goes to the pension agency and draws his quarter allowance in the same kind of notes. So far all right. We know that these which he receives for his bullion are worth 100 cents on the dollar, because the gentleman from Ohio tells us so. We know that those issued from the Pension Bureau are only worth 70 cents on the dollar, for we have the assurance of the same high authority on that point.

"But the man puts the money all in the same pocket book and gets it mixed so that he cannot tell which he got for his bullion and which he received on account of pension. The question at once arises: What kind of money has he got? [Laughter.] This is a matter of some concern to me. Representing a silver-producing constituency, and there being many pensioners among them, I do not like the idea of having them all tangled up with their money in that kind of a way.

"If the gentleman from Ohio, out of the abundance of his resources, can convince me that it will lead to any such complications, I shall be strongly inclined to vote against this bill. But as the silver miner would be very likely to unravel the snarl in which he finds himself by disposing of all his money at 100 cents on the dollar, and as everybody else would no doubt do the same thing, in which case nobody could lose anything, I shall be obliged to reject this new system of logic and vote for the measure."

The illustration was a home thrust, completely puncturing the two principal and utterly contradictory arguments constantly urged against free coinage. It was greeted with a perfect roar of laughter and applause, and it was some moments before order was sufficiently restored to enable Nevada's representative to continue.

The speech as a whole was a thorough and exhaustive discussion of the question in all its bearings, and I hazard nothing in saying that no "gold bug" in the country will undertake to answer it, or can do so if he tries. I understand that the speech is already in great demand. Many Congressmen have ordered a large number of copies for circulation in their various districts.

SILVER MEN DISCOMFIED.

The reverse in the House has cast a damper upon the silver men in the Senate.

Nevertheless Senator Stewart has given notice that he will on Monday next call up the silver bill for consideration in that body. Some interesting developments may be looked for. While not over confident, Mr. Bartine and others are inclined to the opinion that the passage of such a bill by the Senate will strengthen them in the House, and perhaps enable them to secure some legislation better than we now have, in the event of absolute free coinage being beyond their reach.

THE POLITICAL MILLENNIUM.

A Republican Lion and Democratic Lamb Eating Straw Together.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—The Reno Gazette in its issue of Saturday says kind words to Democrats and highly compliments some members of the Democratic State Central Committee. The lion and the lamb lie down and eat straw together and a little child of the legal profession is leading them. The Gazette became the apologist and eulogist of the Democracy and certain members of the Committee are applauding the harmonious union. A political millennium has dawned where least expected and the storms of partisan strife, let me hope, will rage no more between these hitherto opposing forces.

When our enemies praise us, it is well to look over our apparel and learn if there are any openings exposing our nakedness, as the sugar-coated motive in praise must not be wholly disinterested. The Gazette is doubtless aware that any third party movement emphasizing silver in Nevada is a wedge that will open a line for the liberation of the State from boss rule, and the money power of California in the State might receive a check. Looking from the vantage ground of the Gazette such a thing should be avoided if possible by the Democracy. Should the people become aware of their strength the occupation of the bosses and the power of the Gazette would suffer damage. The High Line ditch might be lost to the people and Mr. Newland's chances for an election to Congress very much impaired. Such political calamities as these should be avoided by Democratic bosses—and the sagacity of the Gazette is to be commended.

The Democratic party of the State has washed the dirty linen of the Republican party for many years, and any suspension of the service should be opposed by the best ability of the Gazette—as any breaking up of old ways would, no doubt, cut off from the bosses the crumbs that fall from their master's tables during the canvass. The best interests of the people and State should not have the weight of a feather in the scales of political and party supremacy where the Gazette and the bosses agree.

LOOKER ON.

Virginia City, April 3, 1922.

A Word Explainer.

The JOURNAL disclaims all responsibility for the appearance of the name of the "Royal" in the list of baking powders inserted in this paper recently, the whole article being merely an advertisement from a competing baking powder company. The statements in the article referred to, unfavorably reflecting upon the Royal Baking Powder, have been investigated and prove entirely untrue.

A careful examination shows that the reports from which the quotations in said article are alleged to have been made, where they refer to the Royal Baking Powder or its constituents, class it as a cream of tartar powder, show it to be of superior purity and wholesomeness, and the greatest in leavening strength of any baking powder tested.

Although it is unlikely that such statements incorporated in a paid advertisement could harm an article of such high reputation and well known purity and excellence as the Royal Baking Powder, we make this explanation that our readers may understand the true character of the publication.

The Georgia Minstrels.

The Georgia Minstrels gave a performance at the Opera House last night that was first class in every particular. The jokes were mostly new, and there was nothing to give offense to the most fastidious. Tom Brown and Billy Kerands as end men are a show of themselves. The applause with which each succeeding number was greeted showed that the audience was satisfied. There was no waiting or dragging of the performance, each number following in rapid succession, which is a feature of itself. The entertainment was not one of expensive stage settings and costumes, but a performance of artists, a show of minstrelsy pure and simple. The company deserves the public patronage, and should be greeted throughout their travels with a better house in proportion to the size of the town in which they show than they were here.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A HORRIBLE FEAR.

The Terrific Thought in a Mother's Mind Does Not Prevent Her Shopping.

Two women and a baby were the dramatic part of a typical feminine episode the other afternoon. The mother of the baby, Mrs. A., with her precious charge, a lusty boy of thirteen months, drove over to pay a visit to a friend in Brooklyn who was staying with a resident of that city with whom Mrs. A. was slightly acquainted. The friend whom she had come to see had just left but the lady of the house pleasantly received her, and she remained for a little chat.

Mention chance to be made of home-stitched bed linen and Mrs. B. remarked that a certain Brooklyn shop was offering wonderful bargains in that line, whereupon Mrs. A. confessed her need and desire for these articles, and in the end carried off Mrs. B. in her carriage to guide her to the desired shop. Arrived there, the dilemma of what to do with the baby was finally solved by Mrs. B., who was sure she could amuse him long enough for his mother to accomplish her purpose.

With some misgivings Mrs. A. left and Mrs. B. found within five minutes of her disappearance that she had undertaken a serious responsibility. The child became frightened at being with a stranger and cried vehemently. Mrs. B. kept him in the carriage as long as possible, then got out and walked with him, but, as all Fulton street began to get interested, she in despair thought she must hunt up his mother.

She went into the shop, the baby screaming at the top of his voice, and made her way, embarrassed and irritated, through the crowd to the linen counter. Mrs. A. was not there nor apparently anywhere else in the shop, for Mrs. B. made search as thoroughly as her roving charge would permit without success.

"Where can Mrs. A. have gone?" she exclaimed in her despair to the coachman when she came out again. "Sure," said that functionary stolidly from the box, "it'll be in the fifth floor she'll be by this time."

It was nearly an hour later that Mrs. A. appeared, excited and breathless, and poor Mrs. B.'s arms ached, head ached and temper ached sadly before that welcome moment arrived.

"Oh, did he cry, bless his heart?" exclaimed the mother, seizing the baby. "I was so afraid he might, but I just couldn't lose those wonderful bargains."

Mrs. B. deemed a reply useless and only gasped in relief as she sank back in the cushions. The cream of the affair came, however, a moment afterward as they were rolling toward upper Brooklyn again, the baby gradually slackening his sobs under the soothing of his mother.

"And do you know," said Mrs. A., with only a half laugh, "I was pursued from counter to counter with the dreadful possibility that you might run off with Harold. One reads such shocking things of babies being stolen, and you know," apologetically, "young mothers are so foolish."

At this Mrs. B. could not even gasp.—Her Point of View in New York Times.
